To the DAILY GAZETTEER.

SIR,

THE Love of EASE is inseparable from human Nature, I have often wonder'd that so few Men use the only certain Means of attaining what they so ardently wish for, and what is in every one's Power to enjoy. Nature has kindly ordered, that whatever is most expedient to our Happiness, is most in our Power; and whatever is pernicious to our Peace, is placed at such a Distance, that nothing but our own Folly, and Inattention to our true Interest, can reach.

I am apt to think, the common Method of describing Virtue, as seated in the Midst of Hardship and Difficulty, and as an Enemy to every Gratification of the human Mind, has been greatly instrumental in the ill Conduct of our Youth, and especially of such of them, as possess but indifferent Capacities; such the tremendous Figure Virtue makes in the Mouths of their Preceptors, and the Difficulties attending a steady Adherence to her Dictates, appearing insurmountable, that despairing of her Smiles, they seek the Satisfaction they rashly imagine she denies from her Enemies; supposing Ease and Tranquillity of Mind may more readily be attained, by rejecting those Precepts they fancy incapable of Obedience, than by attempting to climb a Precipice almost inaccessible: — Hence we find Men, whose Passions were an Over-match for their Reason, implicitly giving in to the dangerous Opinion of the Paths of Virtue being overspread with Thorns, and exercising more Care, enduring more Fatigue, suffering more Hardship and Disappointment, in the Pursuit of Ease, by Paths which lead directly from it, than would have been necessary to prevent all they suffer.

Among the Number who style themselves Unhappy, upon a close Enquiry into the several Causes of what they call their Misfortunes, I believe a great Majority would be found to have wrought their own Destruction, by hurrying after Happiness in Paths where Virtue declared they would never find her.

When we view a Man, who, to gratify his Avarice, Lust, his Spleen, or his Rage, has committed an Action of an evil Tendency, we shall see him exercise more Thought to conceal it, and to avoid theodium he knows must attend it, than would have been sufficient to prevent its ever being done; besides which, we shall see him under such Dread and Apprehension of atoning for his Guilt, as will embitter every thing that would otherwise have yielded Delight, and take off that Self-approbation, without which Life is scarce worthy the Name. — This Truth will be fully proved, by descending to two or three familiar Instances, which every Man's Experience will corroborate.

THERE is not a Man more pernicious to Society, than a common Gamester; yet whoever has consider'd the many Difficulties he has to surmount, in order to escape the Punishment of his Frauds, and the Art and Ingenuity he must be Master of to commit them, the numerous Shapes he is obliged to appear in, and the Danger attending his being known in any; the Contempt with which he is look'd upon by Men of real Honour, and his Necessity of appearing such himself to those he gets his Bread by — Whoever considers these, and the many other Things such a Man must be subject to in the Course of his iniquitous Practice, cannot but allow, that the same Capacity might have shone with considerable Lustre, in an employment commendable in itself, and beneficial to those concerned with him; and that less Art, less Trouble, and less Anxiety, than he must necessarily endure, would enable such a Man to be useful to Society, and even more profitable to himself, than is requisite to enable him to deceive, and to defraud, and to betray: — And the Checks and Contrivances that does, and ever will attend Courses of that kind, are harder to be borne than the gentle Restraints of Virtue, which would be milder at the Instant, and free from the Pangs of Recollection; which, notwithstanding the high Boasting of some Men of this Sort, it is certain they find no Satisfaction in; for if they did, they would never betray their coward Fearfulness of being alone, by the Impatience with which they haste from one Place of publick Resort to another; — not able to find Satisfaction in their own Company, and frighten'd at the Approach of Thought, they rush from Error to Error, till growing desperate of Relief from Reflection, they become its Enemies, and seek that Enjoyment in a Repetition of Actions unwarranted by Reason or Justice, which can only be attained by an Attention to our real Ease at first.

It will not, I presume, be denied, that the common Prostitutes, who infect our Streets, to the publick Reproach, and the Corruption and Ruin of our Youth, pursue that scandalous Life in Hopes of enjoying more Ease therein, than they expect from any other Means of Subsistence; for it is certain, that few among them, at their first entering upon it, prefer that Station from a real liking of it, but from a supposed Necessity of enduring more in another Way of living — Yet, on the shortest Reflection, it is evident, that more Care, more Labour, and Suffering, is endured by one of these Wretches, than usually attends a Woman in any commendable Employment, who is free from the many disagreeable and troublesome Consequences the former cannot hope to escape.

THE many Men among us who live under a continual Dread of their Creditors, is another Proof of a mistaken Endeavour after EASE: For I have known a Man spend more Time, more Money, and more Thought, in keeping his Creditors from their just Due, than would have satisfied every legal Demand upon him; and have often thought, that the same industrious Application which some Men have employ'd in ruining their Circumstances and their Characters, would have encreased and supported both; and the many mortifying Thoughts which must infallibly perplex a Man in a Prison, of his own procuring, might frequently have been escaped by the Employment of one Hour annually in calculating the Income and Expence of the Year: For it is my Opinion, that many more suffer from a Byass to Ease, and a Fear of being perplex'd on a View of their Circumstances, than from a deliberate Intention to distress themselves and others; some of the latter indeed sometimes appear; but, of the former, every Week furnishes melancholy Instances.

FROM these, and many more Confirmations of the same Truth, which will occur on the bare mention of it, I believe it will be found demonstrable from general Experience, that what contributes most to our Ease, and to our true Interest; what is most serviceable to ourselves, and produces the most beneficial Consequences to Society, is always attended with least Trouble in the Performance, and remember'd with the most Satisfaction. I am,

SIR,

Your humble Servant,
ALG. SIDNEY.

COUNTRY NEWS.

Newcastle, Dec. 16. By Tuesday's Post his Majesty's Free Pardon came to the Hands of Mr. Wharton, Under-Sheriff of Northumberland, for William Wealams and Luke Rutherford, convicted last Affize on the Black Act.

We hear from Workington in Westmoreland, that last Sunday there was a great Riot and Disturbance at that Place; and that John Burne, a Mason out of Staffordshire, was knocked down with the Butt-End of a Musket, and then beat in so miserable a Manner, that he died that Night. The Mob had Swords and Fire Arms; but we have not yet heard the Verdict of the Jury, nor the Reason that occasioned it.

HOME PORTS.

Whitehaven, Dec. 18. The Nelson, Skelton, is arrived at Laern, near Belfast; and the Morning Star, Mitchel, at Belfast, both from Virginia, of and for this Port.

We hear that at the Sittings after last Term at Westminster, before the Lord Chief Baron Comyns, a Cause was tried between the King and Benjamin Lockyer, a Grocer in Leather-Lane, Holbourn, on an Information for the treble Value of 3850 Pounds Weight of Tea, which came to his Hands without Payment of Duties; and it being fully proved to the Jury, that the Defendant had received, between May and November 1736, upwards of that Quantity of Run Tea, they gave a Verdict for the King. It appeared that the Tea was brought to London in Hackney Coaches from Norwood in Surry, at about Three hundred Pounds Weight at a Time, and always convey'd to the Defendant's House late at Night.

And we hear that at the same Sittings, another Cause was tried between the King and Mrs. Martha Loyd, a Lodger at Mr. Vaughan's, a Silversmith in Prince's-street, Leicester Fields, upon an Information for the Penalty of Two hundred Pounds, for having East India Silks in her Custody; and the Fact being fully proved, the Jury gave a Verdict for the King. It appeared that these Silks did not belong to her, but that she concealed them in her Lodgings for another Person, which made her liable to the Penalty.

He was perceived to be alive when carried off, and a Smelling Bottle was put to his Nostrils immediately, in the Sight of several Persons, and he was afterwards let Blood, and is now thought to be alive.

The Famous and Inestimable PROLIFICK ELIXIR,
The highest, richest and most powerful Cordial in Nature,

BEING the only true and infallible Cure for BARRENNESS in Women and IMPOTENCY in Men in the Universe, and which it at once accomplishes without the least Trouble, even after all other Remedies have fail'd, as Thousands have experienced, and that by promoting the cheerful Curricie of the Blood and Juices, raising all the Fluids from their languid, depressed State, to one more florid and sparkling, opening all Obstructions, fortifying the Nerves, encreasing the Animal Spirits, restoring a Juvenile Bloom, and evidently replenishing the crispy Fibres of the whole Habit, with a generous Warmth and balmy Moisture, and thereby invigorating it to such a Degree as not to be imagin'd, but by those who have experienced how exceedingly and sensibly it renovates, recruits, and powerfully strengthens all the Animal Faculties, and Generative Powers in both Sexes. It inforces a bright, lively Disposition, banishes Melancholy, and inspires Mirth and Gladness of Heart beyond Expression. A abundance of Ladies, who for several Years were deemed incurably Barren, have after twice taking it, conceived and become Fruitful; and great Numbers of Gentlemen, who by fast living, or otherwise, had render'd themselves incapable of Procreation, have soon been enabled by it to propagate their Species, inasmuch, that very many illustrious Families, who,
for want of Children, were almost inconsolable, are now blest with happy Issue, and are (under Providence) indebted to this Great Medicine for their Heirs. It rectifies all Disorders of the Stomach, creates an Appetite, procures a good Digestion, and in all Weakness of Body, or Decay of Constitution of any the Effects of Old Age itself. It is to be taken but a few
